Frida Kahlo was a Mexican painter who is known for her self-portraits, paintings of indigenous Mexican culture, and works inspired by the nature and artifacts of Mexico. She is considered one of the most important artists of the 20th century.

Kahlo was born in Coyoacán, Mexico City, in 1907. She contracted polio at the age of six, which left her with a lifelong disability. In 1925, she was involved in a bus accident that left her with severe injuries. She spent the next year in the hospital, where she began to paint.

Kahlo's paintings are often characterized by their surrealism, symbolism, and use of bright colors. She often painted herself in her paintings, and her works often explore themes of identity, pain, and sexuality.

Kahlo was married to the Mexican artist Diego Rivera. They had a stormy relationship, but they remained married until Kahlo's death in 1954.

Kahlo's work has been exhibited in museums around the world. She is considered one of the most important artists of the 20th century, and her work continues to inspire artists and viewers alike.
